

Van Zuyverden Clematis Jackmanii

Clematis vines are prized for their incredible flowers. Known as the “Queen of the Climbers”, clematis plants will gracefully train onto trellises and fences, or arch gracefully over doorways. They are stunning when used alone, creating major focal impact and add much vertical interest to the garden. Clematis is an excellent choice for a home garden landscape, or for informal use in containers. They are beneficial for pollinators and attract butterflies.

A true classic climbing vine

Incredible number of single royal purple blossoms.

Great arbor plant

About This Variety: A true garden classic, Clematis Jackmanii has an incredible number of royal purple multiple blossoms that bloom from June to September. Profuse flowers - 5-7 inches in diameter - are open and four-sepaled.

Growing Instructions: Conditions will determine how well and large your vine will grow. The vine itself likes the sun, but the base of the plant (roots) like to be kept cool which presents a bit of a challenge. One way to accomplish this is to plant ground cover around them or by applying a good layer of mulch. They may also be grown in containers.

Care Tip: Water weekly. Annual pruning will help clematis look their best and produce more flowers. Sun exposure effects flower color.

Exposure: Partial shade to full sun

Height: Grows 10-12' tall

Spacing: Plant 3' apart, 2" deep

Blooms: Blooms summer

USDA Zones: Hardy in USDA zones 3-9
