

Limited Warranty Statement

The TR Industrial limited warranty covers the original purchaser's product in the event that genuine defects resulting from materials or workmanship is discovered. Your product will be either repaired or replaced if such conditions are verified.

This warranty is effective for 2 years from the original purchase date. Mail the completed registration card included in this manual to activate the warranty within 90 days of the purchase date.

If the TR Industrial product is found to be defective due to faulty material or workmanship, TR Industrial will repair or replace the product without charge for parts or labor.

To successfully utilize your warranty, you must first register our product. You must also ensure that the product reaches TR Industrial within the warranty period, and not after. The expense of delivering the product to TR Industrial as well as the expense of returning it back after repair or replacement is the responsibility of the owner. Proof of purchase will be required to process the warranty to substantiate any warranty claim.

This warranty does not cover any TR Industrial product that has been subjected to misuse, neglect, negligence or accidents. It is not covered if it is rented out to third parties. The product will not be covered if regular maintenance instructions are not followed and/or if the apparent defect is a result of regular wear and tear.

TR Industrial may change or improve the design of any of its products without notice, and it will not be responsible for changing previous models to make them match newer models.

As stated previously, the warranty described in this manual is limited, and it is completely void after the term specified has ended. The warranty does not go beyond repair and/or replacement for TR Industrial products and has no other obligations to products regardless of the issues at hand. No loss of revenue, damage to property, loss of time or inconvenience is covered under the TR Industrial warranty. There are rules that vary from state to state, which may affect the preceding statements.
